THURSDAY EVENING, JUNE 26.

A Terrible Boat Ride. Clear Creek is a minature river that runs through the canon of the same name. It deseends upon a down grade of four hundred feet per mile, with here and there a fall over a rocky precipice fifteen or twenty feet in height. Large boulders, forty and fifty feet in diameter, and weighing thousands of tons, impede its dashing progress every two or three hundred yards, while its curves are so sharp and so frequent that the stream can nowhere be seen for a distance of a thousand feet. Granite cliffs two and three miles high project over it on either side, and give a frightful, romantic and dangerous appearance to the rushing torrent

Just below Black Hawk, on the side of the stream, a small reservior has been constructed in which is kept an ordinary skiff. Last Sunday two little sons of Martin F. Walker, aged respectively ten and twelve years, got into the boat, and were splashing the water with a stick when the fastenings gave way and the boat went drifting towards the rapidly running current. The little boys soon discovered their danger, but were powerless to avert it; so they clutched hold of the side of the boat, and with pallid countenances awaited their doom. Soon the boat was caught by the current and began descending at a fearful rate; over Black Hawk rapids they went like an arrow, clearing a distance of sixty feet at a single dash. Lighting again on the torrent surface the boat seemed to have gained a new impetus, and shot by the boulders and around the rocky points with the celerity of a sunbeam.

At a distance of about six miles below the starting point conductor Gibbons, who was standing on the rear platform of the down C. C. train, saw the boat coming, and immediately stopped the train. All hands repaired to the water's edge, and did everything in their power to arrest the flying boat, but past them she went like a bullet from a rifle, and was out of sight in a moment.— The conductor then ordered the engineer to put on a full head of steam and follow as rapidly as possible, which he did, constantly sounding the alarm of danger. He did not get another glimpse of the boat, but the alarm brought the employees at Beaver Creek Station to the lookout, and quickly making a slipnoose they sought to throw it over the bow of the boat as she came under the bridge. This they succeeded in doing, but could no more hold it than they could have held a thunderbolt, and over Beaver Creek Falls she went with the speed of the lightning. The falls are about thirty feet high, and at the foot are a number miles below Denver. Through Golden into the Platte river, and under the Denver bridges she went unnoticed, nor slackened her pace until she lodged in a drift at the distance below Denver above mentioned. The Platte does not run very rapidly, but the boat had acquired such a wonderful speed in its descent from the moun tains that it far outrode the current. A Mr. Walsh, who lives on a farm near the drift where the boat lodged, discovered the boys still in the boat which was nearly full of water, and took them to his home. They were restored Grand orchestral concert. to their overjoyed parents the following even-ing, after having accomplished the most perilous journey, in the quickest time, ever before made by any human being who escaped alive. The distance travelled was one hundred and forty miles in two hours, but how it was ever done, or how the boat escaped being dashed to pieces upon some of the huge boulders or rooky cliffs which everywhere intercept the course of Clear Creek, is nothing short of a providential miracle. Probably not again in a thousand years could the journey be made with the best appliances, and by the most skilful mariners.—Central City, (Col.) Coach.

The Injunction Against the Street Railroad.

The reason why it was desired to stop the progress of the Street Railroad was because Colonel Clifford was afraid that the tearing up of King street would interfere with the country custom of his friend, Mr. SIMON BLONDHEIM, cornor of King and Fairfax streets. After consultation with Mr. B. the Colonel found that the street cars far from injuring Mr. B's. business, would in the end be of service to it; and our citizens need now fear no further interruption to its pro-
